

Non-Attorney Advocate Disclaimer

Access Growth Advocacy

Effective Date: Jun 6, 2026

Access Growth Advocacy (“AGA,” “we,” “our,” or “us”) provides non-attorney special education advocacy services to support families as they navigate the special education process.

1. Not a Law Firm

Access Growth Advocacy is not a law firm. Madison Nigh is not an attorney and does not provide legal advice, legal representation, or legal services.

Nothing on this website, in our resources, in communications with AGA, or through our advocacy services should be interpreted as legal advice.

Families who need legal advice, legal interpretation, legal representation, or assistance with litigation, due process hearings, settlement agreements, appeals, court proceedings, or other legal matters should consult with a licensed attorney.

2. Role of a Non-Attorney Advocate

AGA provides educational advocacy support, which may include:

- Reviewing educational records
- Helping families understand IEPs, 504 Plans, evaluations, services, accommodations, and school-based supports
- Preparing families for school meetings
- Attending school meetings as a parent advocate
- Drafting advocacy-related letters, requests, and parent input statements
- Supporting communication between families and schools
- Helping families organize concerns, questions, and next steps
- Providing educational information related to special education processes and parent participation

AGA's role is to support, educate, organize, and advocate with families. AGA does not act as an attorney, does not appear as legal counsel, and does not provide legal opinions.

3. Educational and Advocacy Purposes Only

Information provided on this website and through AGA services is for general educational, informational, and advocacy purposes only.

Special education matters are highly individualized. Outcomes may vary based on the student's needs, evaluations, records, school district, state procedures, available data, and other specific circumstances.

AGA does not guarantee any specific result, including but not limited to eligibility decisions, IEP changes, 504 Plan changes, placement decisions, service approvals, evaluation outcomes, meeting outcomes, complaint outcomes, or district responses.

4. No Attorney-Client Relationship

Use of this website, submission of a contact form, downloading a resource, scheduling a consultation, sending an email, or communicating with AGA does not create an attorney-client relationship.

A client relationship with AGA begins only after AGA and the parent/guardian enter into a signed service agreement and any required payment, authorization, or intake steps are completed.

5. Parent/Guardian Decision-Making

Parents and guardians remain responsible for making final decisions about their child's education, services, placement, evaluations, medical care, legal options, and advocacy strategy.

AGA may provide information, recommendations, document support, and advocacy assistance, but final decisions remain with the parent/guardian.

6. When Legal Support May Be Needed

AGA may recommend that a family consult with a licensed attorney when a matter appears to involve legal interpretation, legal risk, due process, settlement agreements, court involvement, formal legal claims, appeals, or other issues outside the scope of non-attorney advocacy services.

Families are always encouraged to seek legal counsel whenever they have questions about their legal rights, legal remedies, or legal obligations.
